- 11 Listen to Chapter 10. Read the text below as you listen and correct the mistakes you hear. The first one is an example. Check your answers on p.55 of the book or in the answer key.

Buck began to sleep ~~inside~~ outside at night, staying away from the camp for weeks at a time. Once he went back up the gorge into the land of woods and waterfalls, and stayed there for a month, looking for the wild brother. He killed his meat as he traveled, and fished in the rivers. Near one stream, he killed a big, black deer, in a terrible fight that showed the fierceness he still had hidden inside him.

Buck's hunger for the taste of blondes was stronger now than ever before. He was a killer, living by heating the animals that he caught. Buck was living life at its worst in a hard world where only the weakest could stay alive. He was intelligent and clearer at getting what he wanted, and he had learned many useful lessons during his hard life in the Southland. All these things made him as great and wrong as any wild animal. His body was working perfectly. When he smelled or heard something, he could jump toward it or away from it twice as fast as any puppy dog. His muscles were as strong as gold, and every part of him was full of lift.
