- A Among the many attractions the UK has to offer, food and drink is perhaps unfairly known for the wrong reasons. The image of tasteless, heavy dishes and endless cups of weak tea may be funny to foreigners, but a closer look at some of the lesser-known dishes and drinks might reveal some surprising, and unfamiliar, secrets.
- B The simple sandwich may seem the same old boring, uninspiring snack we all know so well. But your faithful friend has come a long way since the Earl of Sandwich invented it so he could eat meat without getting his fingers dirty. Meet ‘The Cemita’, a Mexican bread roll filled with chilli, pork, cheese, avocado, onion and red sauce. Different, eh? Delicious, too.
- C The English are well known for being beer drinkers, drinking millions of pints a year. Other nations produce and consume beer, but the incredible variety of beer made in the UK is what makes it special. The thousands of UK pubs offer more than 2,000 different types of beer, ranging from the world famous to the unknown. There is a beer for every taste, every occasion, every pocket.
- D Sir Walter Raleigh wasn’t the first person to bring the potato to England, and the English didn’t invent chips, or French fries. However, the famous vegetable is responsible for the modern phrase ‘chips with everything’. Chips aren’t the most interesting dish perhaps, but think of all the things the potato can be used for, and think of all the things chips can go with.
- E Is soup just a liquid of boring vegetables heated up to keep the British warm in the winter? Don’t dismiss this dish so easily. You can mix and match virtually anything to make a tasty soup. Consider chicken tortilla soup – chicken, beans, tomatoes, salsa, chillies, tortilla chips and cheese. Bring ingredients together and see what new blend you can invent!
- F Tea is the classic British drink at work (with the tea-break) and during leisure time (at tea-time). Tea helps solve every problem. As the British say, ‘There’s nothing like a good cup of tea to cheer you up’. It’s the simple drink that joins all British people together. There are lots of different kinds of tea, such as Earl Grey or Lapsang Souchong, but the traditional British cup of tea is a plain breakfast tea.
